MEET AT YARDLEY

Dr. C. F. Sampsel, Deputy
Coroner, Speaks; Officers
Are Nominated

YARDLEY, Mar. 10—The storm of Saturday hindered some firemen and members of auxiliaries throughout the county in their attendance at the quarterly meeting of Bucks County Firemen's Association, there being but 80 men and 40 women at the sessions. Yardley Fire Company, No. 1, and Auxiliary served as host and hostess on this occasion.

Following a welcome by A. S. Cadwallader, burgess of Yardley, James E. Groome, president of the firemen's association, called upon the Rev. Walter Pew, rector of the local Episcopal Church, who offered prayer.

The addresses of the evening were delivered by Captain Frank A. Rowe, Philadelphia; and Dr. Charles F. Sampsel, Bristol.

Captain Rowe, who is one of the fire commissioners in the Oak Lane section, dwelt upon combat of fires caused by incendiary bombs abroad. Dr. Sampsel, the deputy coroner of Bucks County, spoke to the firemen on the subject of venereal diseases.

William L. Stackhouse, Doylestown, reported progress on revision of by-laws of the organization; and also gave a report on preliminary planning for the county.

In the absence of fire marshal, Raymond Strunk, Mr. Stackhouse mentioned to the organization that one death, that of a man near Langhorne, Continued On Page Four DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 10—Five permits, two of which are for renovations costing $250; two for permission to erect signs, and one for the installation of a heater, have been issued by Louis Moerman, Jr., clerk for Doylestown Borough Council.

Edward E. Hissend was granted a permit to make alterations, including the building of a rest room, the installation of an archway between the kitchen and dining room, at 57 West Oakland avenue.

Norman W. Lear was granted a permit to change a door into a window and build a bathroom partition on the first floor of his apartment house at 102 North Main street, at an expenditure of $50.

Fred Reed, of Clymer's store, was granted a permit to install a heater for Vernon Morris at a property at 82 Cottage street.

Harper Signs, 26 Parrish street, Philadelphia, was granted a permit to erect a sign, "Lenape Pharmacy," for Julian W. Gandy in the Odd Fellows' Building, State and Main streets. Nate Sign Service was granted a permit to erect a sign at the Molloy Building, West Oakland avenue.

The three permit signs netted Borough Council $3, the building permits $3, and the heating permit $1. Because of the absence of any permits for new houses, building in the County Seat is standing still this week.

PENN VALLEY AND LOCAL WOMEN ENTER SUITS

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Lake, of Near
Morrisville, Asks $25,000
In Trenton Court

TRUCK OUT OF CONTROL

TRENTON, N. J., Mar. 10 — Mrs. Elizabeth K. Lake, a resident of Penn Valley, near Morrisville, Pa., has entered suit here for $25,000 damages, the outgrowth being the result of an accident on Bristol Pike, when Mrs. Lake was struck by a truck.

Plaintiff testimony was heard at the end of the week by Judge Oliphant and a Mercer Circuit court jury.

Defendants in the litigation are Lombard Bros., Inc., Trenton, owners of the truck, and Francis Szabo, driver. The vehicle allegedly got out of control, striking Mrs. Lake as she was bunched asparagus behind a small roadster in front of her home. The mishap occurred May 31, 1939.

On the stand, Mrs. Lake, who is asking $20,000, testified she sustained an injury to her hip and right foot and that she is now unable to conduct her roadside stand. Her husband, Theodore, seeks $5,000 damages for expenses incurred as a result of the accident.

The plaintiffs are represented by Nicholas M. Giordano, Jr., and Samuel Lenox, while George Gildea is appearing for the defendants.

In the same court, the Trenton-New Brunswick Theatres Company, operators of the RKO Capitol Theatre, Trenton, won a voluntary non-suit in a $20,000 damage action brought by Mrs. Alice M. Reid, of near Bristol, for injuries to her ankle allegedly suffered when she fell in the theatre.

Motion for the non-suit, which terminated trial of the cause, was made by Frank I. Casey, counsel for the plaintiff, the latter abandoning her case as testimony was slated to be resumed. Prior to the motion, a mixed jury visited the theatre to view the scene of the mishap. Counsellor Lenox represented the defendant company.

Rescue Squad Has Busy Week-End; Motorist Hurt

Bucks County Rescue Squad had a busy week-end, Crofton unit, answering five calls for its ambulance on Saturday and one on Sunday.

One case Saturday was for removal of an accident victim to Harriman Hospital. The injured was Richard Waterhouse, Jr., Newportville, who suffered abrasions of the scalp. Following treatment he returned to his home.

Waterhouse, according to records of Pennsylvania Motor Police, was operating a truck on Bristol Pike, Andalusia, at 6:30 p. m., when the vehicle is said to have struck a parked sedan, owned by Harry V. Hibbs, Andalusia. Private Mitchell was the investigating officer.

Daughter Knew Best

(By "The Stroller")
A Mill street mother learned this week that tots sometimes know what they are talking about.

The mother refused to give her young daughter an egg carton to take to school, so that the child might bring home some eggs, refusal being on the supposition that eggs couldn't possibly be given away at school.

After meeting with refusal several times, the youngster asked a neighbor for a carton and was promptly given one.

That afternoon when she returned from classes she triumphantly carried some eggs.

It appears that several crates of the hen fruit were secured through the government surplus foods plan of distribution, and with no facilities to cook the same, the eggs were promptly apportioned to the scholars.

Strike at Plant Working On Defense Orders

Philadelphia, Mar. 10—While a U. S. labor conciliator strove to effect a settlement, 1500 employees of the J. G. Brill Company—which holds $418,661 in national defense contracts—walked out today in a strike ordered by the CIO's steel workers organizing committee.

Nazis Say American Ships Will Be Sunk

Berlin, Mar. 10—Any American ships carrying aid to Britain under terms of the lease-lend bill will be sunk the moment they pass Germany's "iron ring" of blockade around the British Isles, Nazi military authorities reiterated today.

While the press lashed out at President Roosevelt as an "absolute dictator" waging an undeclared war on Europe on behalf of Britain, officials emphasized that Adolf Hitler gave his answer to the bill on January 30, long before it was passed.

It was on that date the Fuehrer announced that any ships carrying aid to Britain which came within the range of German U-boat torpedoes would be sunk, regardless of nationality.

"This was a clear warning to America," a spokesman said, "that if the President sends naval or merchant ships into the blockade zone they will be sunk on sight, the same as any other vessels crossing the deadline."

All responsible circles in Berlin agreed that no ships will be exempted from the Atlantic "death penalty."

5 YEARS OF ADJUSTMENT NEEDED AFTER THE WAR

Mrs. Richard Cary Tells How To Plan For Children In Post-War World

AT SOLEBURY P. T. A.

SOLEBURY, Mar. 10—Speaking on the question, "How Can We Plan For Our Children in a Post-World War?" Mrs. Richard Cary, teacher of history and Bible at Holmquist School, told members of the Solebury Parent-Teacher Association at their fairly well attended meeting in the consolidated school building, here, last week, that the people of this nation have a feeling of security.

"They have this feeling," she said, "because they are under the impression they have no enemies on either side of the Pacific and Atlantic."

Speaking before about 30 persons, Mrs. Cary said it will take the world about five years to become adjusted after the conclusion of the war. Mrs. Cary, who spent from 1939 to 1935 in Europe, during which time she was engaged in Friends' service work in Germany, declared there will be a new world order at the conclusion of the war.

Nations, she said, can never be entirely isolated, and in this connection she pointed out that nations are becoming more inter-dependent. It was at this point that Mrs. Cary said the people in this nation have a feeling of security because they are convinced they are living in the greatest nation of the world. The people of this nation, she added, do not know what it is to fear an enemy. For this reason, it was said, the people of the United States cannot understand the fears, jealousies and hatred of the smaller countries of continental Europe.

Thoughts On The Fight

Washington, March 8.
NOW that the prolonged debate has ended and final enactment of the lease-lend bill has been achieved, there are several things to be said. Some of these concern the character of the fight; some of them concern the developments to follow.

AS to the first, no room is left for the opponents of the measure to complain either that they were gagged or that the President jammed the bill through. The bill was introduced in the House on January 10 and passed by that body on February 8. The Senate committee began hearings on January 27 and reported the bill to the Senate on February 13. The Senate debate has lasted more than three weeks.

DEFENSE JOB TRAINING

A million workers will have completed their intensive training courses in the vocational schools of the country by the end of June and be ready to take skilled jobs in defense production industries. This is the optimistic prediction of the United States Office of Education based on reports from the hundreds of cities where courses have been provided.

The training in most instances has been on the unit basis, that is, the student has been taught a definite skilled occupation. How effective on the whole this training has been is, of course, yet to be shown. A number of factors aside from that of the trainee's adaptability is involved. Whether the specific operation taught the student is the kind on which he is fairly certain to be employed is one. How closely training programs have been adapted to the employment needs of the areas in which they are being carried on is another.

In the degree of skill attained, the larger responsibility rests on the instructors. How to start and operate a stationary machine tool is not difficult to teach, but the real test is in instilling knowledge not so much of the handling of the controls of a machine as of the form and use of tool shapes, cutting clearances, feeds, speeds and the like. Blue print reading and shop mathematics also must be understood. So the burden on the instructors is knowing not only what to teach, but how to teach it in the comparatively short period permitted for the course.

What influence the defense program has had in persuading workers to seek training in the skilled trades is attested by the fact that enrollment in the regular vocational program now totals 2,000,000, the highest ever reached.

OVERCOATS OFF

In the old days the first warm day of spring was the cue for administration by grandmother of doses of sulphur and molasses and for a surreptitious change from heavy underwear to something thinner or none at all. Nowadays one simply leaves the winter overcoat at home and runs the risk of welcoming spring with trumpeting on the nasal bugle.

Nevertheless, the leaving of that heavy overcoat off and stepping forth unencumbered into the clear, crisp air of a spring day is a grand and glorious feeling. It is a sensation one looks forward to from year to year.

When the mercury begins its spring ascension the old overcoat, which was such a comfort when it was first drawn over the shoulders last autumn, becomes heavy and burdensome. It ceases to be a comfort and becomes a nuisance. It is a load to be carried, a handicap to progress and super-cargo to be discarded at the first opportunity.

A wife is a creature who snatches a minute between cleaning up the dishes, the house and the children to skim through an article on "Should Married Women Work?"

Frequently nice things are done to comfort the shut-ins. But Britain is doing nothing to comfort Mussolini.

Now approaches March 15 to convince most persons that mathematics is a mighty useful science in these days of higher taxation.

ECHOES OF THE PAST

By Courier Staff Member

Review of the news as it appeared in the Bucks County Gazette issue dated at Bristol June 12, 1878. The Gazette, a weekly newspaper published in Bristol, was discontinued following its merger with the Courier.

Among the establishments in Bristol worthy of mention is that of George S. Stone & Son, plumbers, steam and gas fitters. They have recently moved into their large and commodious stone building on the corner of Pond and Lafayette streets, and which was constructed to meet their wants, where they keep a full assortment.

The annual examination of teachers for certificates in Bucks County will be held as follows, commencing each day at nine o'clock a. m.: June 12th, Falls township; 13th, Upper Makefield; 19th, Middletown and Langhorne; 20th, Bristol township; 21st, Bensalem; 30th, Bristol borough; July 1st, Morrisville; 2nd, Lower Makefield; 5th, Newtown borough and township; 8th, Southampton; 9th, Warminster; 10th, Northampton; 12th, Buckingham; 15th, Solebury and New Hope.

The keg factory of A. Pursell & Co., situated at the foot of Cedar street, caught fire last Saturday afternoon, and in a few minutes the whole building was in a blaze. The work of destruction was rapid. Fortunately the wind was in a favorable direction, for had it been otherwise, it would have been almost impossible to save a number of buildings in the vicinity. The building with the machinery was insured for $5,200.

This morning Dr. Ward's horse took a notion to run away. The doctor was driving on Pond street, and on turning into Mulberry the horse started on a full run, but was brought up at Allen's store, corner of Radcliffe. The doctor was thrown out, a hitching-post broke off short, but fortunately no other damage was done.

Messrs. C. W. & J. Pelree manufacture in addition to a large quarter of piece goods, druggists, crumb cloths, etc., nearly 2000 felt skirts a day. After next Monday their mills will be kept running night and day. They have over 200 employees engaged.

Prince Albert Lodge, Sons of St. George, will give a concert at Washington Hall, on Monday evening, June 16th.

Mr. Barzillon Fenton, a former Bristolian, who formerly was in the employ of Seymour Taylor, was struck by lightning, at Asbury Park, N. J., last Thursday, and instantly killed.

George Strausser on last Saturday purchased at public sale the lot on Bath street belonging to Capt. Hand's estate. The lot has a frontage of 37 feet and the price paid was $500.

Peyton DeWitt, Bristol's enterprising florist, will about July 1st, build another large greenhouse at his place on Pond street.

The old Episcopal chapel has been torn down and removed to Langhorne Park.

New Hope school was broken into a short time ago, and despoiled of a Webster's Unabridged, a hatchet, and a coat belonging to Mr. Sellers, the principal. The locks were broken from four doors, searching for booty, but nothing else was taken. Zells Encyclopedia was carried as far as a door and left there.

The regular meeting of the borough council was held on Monday evening at the council chamber. The street committee made the following report, which was accepted: To the Burgess and Council of Bristol Borough—Gentlemen: We have appointed subject to your approval, lamp lighters for three wards. For the first ward, Charles Saxton; second, John M. Brown, and for the third, Samuel Holt.

"Lover Come Back"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

SYNOPSIS

Fifty years ago, Captain "Dynamite" Danny O'Moore, master of the sealer, "Glory of the West," was in love with Jacqueline Reynall, daughter of Captain Ramps Reynall, terror of Alaska seal poachers. A lover's quarrel parted them shortly before Reynall captured "The Glory." O'Moore always felt that Jacqueline betrayed him. She was the only one who could have copied his charts of the coastline showing his hide-outs. Today, "Dynamite" manages one of Alaska's leading fisheries for his granddaughter, Sondra. Kemp Starbuck, young president of American Packers, and an admirer of Sondra, wants O'Moore's complete catch, but a strange outfit, Baranov Packers, has an option on the late John Bates' contract with "Dynamite" for the fish. Besides, O'Moore disapproves of Kemp's outfit because it employs too many orientals. He believes Japan is charting the Alaskan coastline under the guise of "fishing." What it wouldn't give for "Dynamite's" maps, but he has sworn no one but Uncle Sam will get those! The Baranov option must be exercised by 11 A. M. the next day and a $30,000 advance paid. "Dynamite" is stunned when he learns Jacqueline Reynall owns Baranov Packers and, adding insult to injury, has converted "The Glory" into a floating cannery, captained by her foster son, Jean. That was disillusionment for Sondra; Jean had been her childhood playmate and all through the years she had carried him in her heart. Summoning Jean before him, "Dynamite" declares he will not sell him his catch, but the young man plans to hold him to his contract. On the way out, he asks Sondra to be in the cupola of Echo House (her home) that night at nine as he has something important to tell her. When they were children, John Winthrop, the Forest man, revealed to them the strange acoustic qualities of the cupola; someone talking from a certain point a mile offshore could be distinctly heard in it. It was Jean and Sondra's method of contact when their families' feud kept them apart. Sondra's friend, Liane Bootrin, and Kemp keep Sondra from getting there on time so she misses the first part of Jean's message warning her against some mysterious menace.

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The morning following her experience in the cupola, Sondra woke with a vague feeling that something momentous had happened. Then, swiftly, the events of yesterday clarified in her mind—the arrival of Jean Reynall and the "Glory"; the discovery that Miss Jacqueline was the old ship's owner, as well as the power behind Baranov Packers; Jean's strange fragmentary message which had come to her across the night waters of the bay.

Certain remembered phrases of that message she found no less bewildering now than they had been last night. "Menace . . . even murder. . . . Be on your guard, you and your grandfather." On guard—against what? What menace could there be in dreamy old Sitka that would justify a warning couched in such melodramatic terms?

Darn Kemp and Liane! If they hadn't kept her from reaching the cupola last night in time to hear the first part of Jean's message, she'd know what all this was about.

Jean had told her, "I must go through with what I have to do for Aunt Jack." That meant he intended to defy Dynamite and operate the "Glory" as a floating cannery. If he did, Dynamite certainly would declare a war that would fill the lovely summer with merciless conflict she shrank from contemplating. Jean could not know what a fish war in Alaska meant. Nets slashed, boats rammed, men sacrificed. "Nothing too dirty to pull." He might be overestimating his seeming advantage in finding Dynamite crippled and house-bound, unaware that the old sea-fighter's least command would be ruthlessly and efficiently carried out by young Chris Sandvik, hard-boiled senior captain of the O'Moore fleet. If he really understood this, perhaps he might try to persuade Miss Jacqueline to make peace on Dynamite's terms. Yet, even as Sondra revolved this possibility, a wisdom older than herself told her Jean Reynall was not the man to abandon a set course merely to avoid opposition; nor was he one to urge peace solely because the alternative might mean danger to himself. No, if peace were to be effected, it must be through a better understanding between Jean and her grandfather; through a spirit of compromise permitting each to give a little for the sake of gaining more. What the situation needed now was an arbitrator, and that's where she, Sondra, might come in. But to be successful in such a rôle, she must know both sides of the question. So far, she knew only the O'Moore side. To learn the other, she must see Jean when he came this morning; and before he went upstairs and further antagonized her peppy old grandfather.

Sondra flushed suddenly, realizing she had been trying to rationalize this meeting with Jean. Then, defiantly, she shut her eyes, rested herself marveling less at the boundless abundance of the North than at the greed of men who fought one another so ruthlessly for that harvest when there was more than enough for all.

Along Sitka's waterfront, such men were waiting now for the galvanizing cry, "Herring! The run is on!" Waiting in big O'Moore trawlers; in the small, well-kept vessels of Kemp's fleet; and in the "Siwash Armada," a clutter of slovenly native craft anchored in front of the native village farther along.

On Kemp's float a number of his herring-boat skippers were gathered respectfully around his newly arrived fleet captain, Ikeda. After a brief word to the group, the trim-looking Japanese handed each man in turn a slip of paper which doubtless bore his typed orders for the day. Disciplined efficiency, thought Sondra, wondering at Dynamite's bias against these wiry little brown her chin on her knees, and surrendered to the warm remembrances that had been clamoring for recognition at the back of her mind ever since she woke. . . . The way he had sung the old Thelting song last night. . . . And on the stairs, the way he had looked at her when he said, "Sondra. Grown-up. Beautiful."

A little shiver of happiness went through her. She opened her eyes and raised herself so she could see her reflection in the long mirror across the room. Gravely, impersonally, she scrutinized the small, bare-armed girl in the nest of pillows; big gray-green eyes under tousled red-gold curls. Beautiful! She wanted desperately to be beautiful—for him. But . . .

Did she have faith in Jean Reynall? . . . She didn't know—yet. One thing she did know, without explanation or analysis: She wanted to see him again; to stand close to him and talk with him—alone.

She shrugged into a jade-green satin robe and crossed to the open window.

The radiance of the morning flashed upon her—clear blue distances; trilling of hermit thrushes; fragrance of flowers. Magnificent white clouds billowed against a sky of bachelor-button blue. Sondra gazed over the ocean toward the haunted island of St. Lazaria, and beyond that to a dim, jutting headland, with Mount Edgumbe lifting in slopes of lapis lazuli to a snow-rimmed crater.

It was out there, recently, that scouting fishermen, homeward bound through a heavy fog, had glimpsed a "ghost ship." A mysterious vessel, gray as the vapors that wrapped her, slipping seaward at incredible speed. . . . It was out there, too, that the herring would presently appear in glittering, swimming schools; some twenty square miles in area and many fathoms deep. Incredible numbers of fish! But this morning she found men who handled themselves and their fish-boats so smartly. And how polite they were—each skipper making a jerky bow to Ikeda before he hopped aboard his craft and sent it floating off toward the sheltered reaches of Peril Strait.

But now the multiple put-put-put of their setting-forth was drowned in the roar of a powerful Diesel, as the "Tanya," flagship of the O'Moore fleet, headed out, full speed, through the middle passage that wound through the islands to the open sea.

Sondra waved to Captain Chris Sandvik, whose burly shoulders filled the wheelhouse window. He was bound for the offshore fishing grounds with orders for the O'Moore patrol, maintained day and night to spot the vanguard of the expected run. Aft, on a pile of green nets, fat old Tom Jarvis pattered with the strip-fishing tackle which insured him a day of bliss far from the cares of his bank.

The entire waterfront was astir now—men's voices calling, bells clanging, exhausts roaring; and over all, the strident clamor of gulls. There was something wonderfully stimulating in these sights and sounds, which spoke of the harvesting of the sea that gave life to old Sitka.

There was but one discordant note, which Sondra had studiously avoided seeing until now—the "Glory." But as her eyes moved over the cluttered, stump-masted deck, her frown gave way to a look of happy surprise. Leaning against an outer wall of the "Glory's" charthouse was John Winthrop—the Forest Man. He had been absent from Sitka three years, and this was the first she knew of his return.

As usual, he was bareheaded, and in the sun his thick hair, his beard, and his faded khakis were all one golden shade. Also, as usual, he wore an air of serene watchfulness, as he lounged there facing the Starbuck float.

AMAZING WATER SUPPLY SYSTEM WITH THE DELIVERY OF WATER IN HOGSHEADS IN 1824.
The first municipal plant was constructed in New York City in 1801. Wooden pipes were used to carry the water underground. But drinking water from nearby springs was delivered in most cases as late as 1841.

(Signed) William H. Booz, Robert W. Holt, Thomas B. Harkins, street committee. On motion of Mr. Scheide, the appointments as above made, were confirmed.

The street committee asked for further time in reference to a culvert on Otter street, which was granted.

The borough attorney reported that he would not be ready with his opinion in reference to the digging up of the streets by the gas and water companies, and private persons, until the July meeting.

Mr. Hogue offered a resolution prohibiting the drawing of orders by the clerk after an appropriation shall have been exhausted. The resolution, after being amended at the suggestion of Mr. Scheide, was adopted.

them. And, while there probably will be some irreconcilables, there is every reason to believe that, once the bill is law, the country will be overwhelmingly behind the President in the effort to make it operate effectively in extending full aid to the British. It is true that, as originally drawn, the bill gave vastly too much power to the President; that the amendments have made it a better bill, and that the fight could have been shortened and the weapons of the opposition blunted had Mr. Roosevelt not asked too much to start with.

NEVERTHELESS, the opposition cannot charge that he used the weight of his office to force the bill through in the way he did with the Supreme Court packing bill and the reorganization bill. Then he not only put personal pressure on Senators and made threats, which he later tried to carry out, but members of his Cabinet were upon the floor of the Senate actively lobbying. There has been none of that in this fight. The President has held aloof, left things in the hands of the Senate leaders, kept White House representatives away from the Capitol. It is not his fault that the Senate leadership has been exceedingly inept; that Senator Barkley has been at his bungling worst.

NOW, as to action immediately following passage of the bill, the expectation has been that Mr. Roosevelt would address the country in a special fireside chat, in which he would reassure those who have been alarmed by charges that the bill is a war bill and that he seeks to "drag us into the war." It seems that, now the fight is over, a Presidential speech, again clearly stating our position and purposes, would be particularly timely and helpful. And there is a better-than-even chance that such an address will be made.

THE one thing that may prevent this is the state of the President's health. There is nothing serious the matter with him, but he is said to be suffering from slight sinus trouble and he plans to take a short cruise in Southern waters as soon as he can after he has signed the bill. But, whether he does or not, there will be an immediate increase in activity and the British will benefit not only by the material supplies, but by the psychological effect of an act which officially proclaims us their ally.

IN informed circles there is a feeling that the question of conveying materials to Britain with our own naval vessels has not yet been finally decided. Despite the defeat of the prohibitory amendment, the present Administration attitude is that there is no more purpose to convey than there is to send troops abroad or to declare war. But it is obvious that developments may force a change in this business of conveying. If it becomes clear that the British themselves are unable to provide safe convoys for the materials we are sending, it is difficult to see how we can avoid taking on the job. Because it seems incredibly stupid for us to devote all our energies and vast sums of money to manufacturing goods to save the English, on the theory that that is the way to save ourselves, and then, without a preventive gesture, permit Hitler to send them to the bottom of the ocean.

THAT would seem complete frustration of our whole foreign policy. It would put the nation in the position of furiously working at top speed for nothing. It would stamp us as both futile and absurd. For these reasons, it is argued, if events show England unable herself to insure delivery, the sentiment of our people on the question of American convoy would

Today's Quiet Moment

(By Howard L. Zepp, Th. M.)

"Canst thou by searching find out God? O that I knew where I might find Him. I have heard of Thee by the hearing of the ear; but now mine eye seeth Thee." It seems that we have but to speak to Thee for Thou art closer than breathing, nearer than hands or feet. Would that it were as easy as that. But for most of us the reality of Thy presence is a "discovery." We pray that religious professionalism and religious hearsay may give way to genuine religious certainty. Amen.

Mr. and Mrs. William Gross and family, Philadelphia, were guests last week of Mr. and Mrs. George Zarr, Harriman Park.

ON THE SCREENS

GRAND THEATRE

The peak of screen excitement is reached in "High Sierra," the Grand's new picture. Moins inexorably to his doom, "Mad Dog" Earle, as portrayed by Humphrey Bogart, is the enemy of all that is decent and good, defiant of every law on earth—except the High Sierras. He is a strange man, and his is a strange story that grips your interest with its powerful fascination.

When the prison gates swing back to release Roy Earle, he is not yet a free man. First he must pay back the debt he owes to the mob leader who bought his pardon. Across the continent he rides, past the little farms like the one he lived on as a boy. When he is truly free there will be such a farm for him. On the way he finds time to befriend a touring auto group.

HOME-MAKER SHOULD CHECK UP; LEARN THE FACTS ABOUT EGGS

By Miss Edna Stephany

(Home Economics Representative)
Now is a good time for homemakers to check up on some plain facts about eggs. For eggs are one of the best buys on the market at present and will be for at least four more months.

Eggs are a bargain package of food value at any time. They are good body builders because of the efficient protein in their yolks and their whites. The yolks are especially rich in iron and they are an important source of calcium and phosphorus, and are a good source of riboflavin (vitamin G). For good measure, vitamins A and D are also present.

For these reasons an egg a day for everyone in the family is a good rule to follow. If that isn't possible, try to get at least 4 or 5 eggs a week into the diet of every child. See that adults get at least 3 or 4 eggs a week.

It is seldom wise to buy more than a week's supply of eggs at one time. If possible, buy eggs from a store that keeps them in the refrigerator up until the time they are sold. Put the eggs in a refrigerator or other cool place as soon as you get them home.

Color of shell has nothing to do with egg quality. A good egg may be brown or white of shell.

In a good egg broken from its shell, the yolk stands up firmly. The white is nearly colorless and stands up well around the yolk. The germ spot should be undeveloped or only slightly developed—a tiny spot somewhere on the yolk. As the egg deteriorates, it flattens out and the germ spot may get larger.

The homemaker who follows the practice of cooking all egg dishes at a low temperature is well on her way to mastering egg-cooking technique. The delicate protein in egg becomes tough when it is cooked for a too long time or at too high temperatures.

Today's version of yesterday's tough hard-boiled eggs are tender-eggs, hard cooked in simmering water. For these, use just enough water to cover the eggs well. Start the eggs in cold water. Bring the water to the simmering point and keep it there for about 30 minutes. For soft-cooked eggs, simmer for 3 to 5 minutes. Never let the water boil.

The unsightly green line between the yolk and the white of hard cooked eggs can be cut down and often eliminated by cooking the eggs in simmering water, then putting them into cold water immediately.

First rule for egg-poaching success also is "never let the water boil while the eggs are in it." Have the water deep enough to come up over the top of the eggs. Break the eggs just before you poach them.

For fried eggs, omelets, and scrambled eggs—keep the heat low under a thick frying pan. Or scramble in the top of a double boiler.

Keep soft custards from overcooking by stirring them constantly, cooking them over hot but not boiling water, and taking them off the heat and setting them in cold water as soon as they coat a spoon. Bake a custard in a pan of water in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.). Bake fruit whips in a very slow oven (250 degrees F.). Set in a pan of water.

When eggs and starch are both used to thicken a pudding or a pie filling, cook the mixture thoroughly with the starch in it before adding the eggs. Eggs take much less time to thicken than do cornstarch and flour.

A troubling problem to some cooks is how to get a good pie meringue. Too high oven temperatures and the wrong proportion of sugar to egg white are two common causes of meringue failure.

The following procedure is recommended for a good pie meringue.

Get the eggs out of the refrigerator ahead of time, so they will be at room temperature by the time they are to be beaten. Separate the whites from the yolks carefully so that no bit of yolk gets into the white. Have the beater clean—free from egg yolk or other fat.

Two egg whites are about the right amount for one pie. Beat the egg whites until they take a definite shape in the bowl and stand up by themselves in little peaks.

Next beat in 2 tablespoons of sugar for each egg white, a few grains of salt, and a drop or two of vanilla. Spread this over the top of the pie to the edge of the crust. Bake in a moderate oven (325 degrees to 350 degrees F.) for 15 to 20 minutes or until the meringue is light brown.

SECOND GAME OF PLAY-OFF SERIES TO BE STAGED TONIGHT

Manhattan and Rohm & Haas
Will Again Tangle On Mutual Aid Court

ROHM & HAAS ONE UP

A Win For The Soap-Makers
Will Extend Series To Third Game

A close game is expected on the Italian Mutual Aid floor tonight as the Rohm & Haas and Manhattan team tangle in the second of a three-game series to determine the championship of the Bristol Basketball League. In the preliminary game, the Fifth Ward Sporting Club will meet the Voltz-Texaco gladiators.

The Rohm and Haas team is one up on the Manhattan and a triumph for them tonight will end the season and give the chemical workers the crown they lost in 1939 after winning in 1938. A triumph for the soap-makers will extend the series to the third game which will be played on Thursday night.

Both teams will benefit from their experiences in the first tilt played. Manhattan learned that Joe Roe and Johnny Cole are dead shots from the center mark of the court and the Maple Beach aggregation found out that not only "Punkie" Zeffries is a high man but "Unkie" Gallagher must be watched just as close.

Indications point to a Manhattan victory tonight. The fans who witnessed the first game saw that the Manhattan pivot-man, Joe Snyder, was entirely off form and missed many "duck" shots. Snyder had missed the previous two games played by the soapmen and had temporarily lost the range of the baskets. He found it when the Manhattan spurt was a lost cause.

If Snyder comes back to his own tonight, Manhattan is about certain of victory for if one-half of the number of shots the lanky center missed in the last game were made, a different story would have been typed.

It was an early lead by the Rohm and Haas which set them off for victory in the game played last Thursday and "Augie" Everett and Ralph Cahill started the ball rolling on this drive. "Augie" was slightly bottled during the course of the tilt and Cahill was forced out of the game via the personal foul route.

Followers of the chemical workers claim that had Cahill remained in the game, the score would have mounted to higher proportions. But when Cahill left, Jesse Vanzant began his scoring act and the loss of Cahill was not as great as it was thought to be. Not that Cahill wasn't missed, but Vanzant had a scoring night.

If the score is close and Manhattan has a chance for victory, the man to watch is Nickie Hufnell. Hufnell is the coolest player on the soap-workers lineup when the odds are against them. Three field goals in the last quarter by Hufnell put the Manhattan team within three points of the Rohm and Haas. With Hufnell, "Moose" Mulligan, Snyder, Zeffries and Gallagher, the Manhattaners will be hard to beat.

The preliminary game will see two strengthened League teams in action. The Fifth Ward team intends to use "Chick" DiAngelo, high-scorer of the Bristol High team, and several others who have finished their high school careers. Manager Ray Pico will have an all-former Bristol High school team in action.

In the Voltz-Texaco lineup will be the Barbetta brothers, Bert and Freddie. These along with Berry, Carter, Cooper, Pollack and Hutchison is expected to give the Fifth Warders a tough fight.

Referee "Henny" Morgan will be assisted by "Skeets" Englemeyer in the officiating. The first game will get underway at eight o'clock sharp.

RAMBLERS KEEP NEAR TOP OF HOCKEY LEAGUE

The Croydon Ramblers Saturday night defeated New Brunswick 3 to 1 in a Penna-New Jersey roller hockey league game to remain near the top of the league standing. The game was played at Frankford.

The Ramblers' real threat was Captain Bill Ritter who returned to action, playing his first game since he was injured in November. He celebrated the occasion by scoring all three goals for the Ramblers as he skated up the floor from his defense position to receive a pass from his teammates to score.

Coach Pop Keene was well pleased with the showing of every member of the Ramblers squad.

Charley Berezi and Earl Hardy were the outstanding players for the New Brunswick boys.

Winner Hits The Cords For 60 Field Goals and
28 Fouls

After a three-cornered fight from start to finish, "Punkie" Zeffries, brilliant forward of the Manhattan Soap A. A., won the individual scoring honors of the Bristol Basketball League, beating out Ralph Cahall and "Augie" Everett, of the Rohm & Haas team. Last year, Ralph Cahall won out over Zeffries, so the tables are reversed.

Zeffries hit the cords for 60 field goals and 28 fouls for a total of 148 points, 11 better than Cahall and 14 more than Everett. His average points per game was 10.5. Cahall's average of last season was 12.5. However, last season was a six-club circuit and more games were played. Cahall's total for last year was 238, almost a hundred more than Zeffries, although five more games were played.

Everitt, lanky center of the chemical mixers, made a big jump in the scoring compared to last season when he finished seventeenth. "Reds" Gallagher, Rohm & Haas, dropped from fifth to 14th, while Johnny Slavin, of the Proly team, made a climb from 10th to 5th. Even with Everett in the number of positions leaped was the colored Ray Dorsey, Proly's. Dorsey was 18th on the list in 1939 and 4th this season, with an average of 8.8.

In his first year of independent basketball, Joe Pica, Fifth Ward, made a wonderful showing, coming in seventh. Pica shaved foul-shooting honors with Slavin, the latter having 19 out of 39 tries, and Pica 17 out of 29.

Methodists Change Pastors of 61 Churches

High-lighting the transfers was the appointment of the Rev. Frank Prentzel, Jr., of Allentown's Asbury Church, as Northwest district superintendent, with jurisdiction over 72 congregations. He succeeds the Rev. Dr. Roy N. Kelsier, who was named pastor of Swarthmore Methodist Church.

Bishop Richardson announced the changes, the smallest number made in several years, before 700 lay delegates and ministers, representing 325 churches.

The conference covers Southeastern Pennsylvania, west to Harrisburg, and north to Hazelton. Prentzel, a native of Philadelphia, was graduated from the University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; and from Drew Theological Seminary. He spent 10 years of his ministry in the churches of Philadelphia, and its suburbs, and was appointed to Asbury Church four years ago.

Changes in churches in lower Bucks County, which are included in the North District of the conference, total but four. Bristol Church is to have a new pastor, the Rev. W. E. P. Haas, Jr., succeeding the Rev. J. Carpenter Zook.

Harriman Church's new pastor will be the Rev. E. K. Knetter, succeeding the Rev. James Matchette; while the Rev. Wesley Radcliffe succeeds the Rev. Howard W. Oursler at Cornwells Heights Church; and the new pastor at Yardley and Washington Crossing churches is the Rev. L. F. Walley, succeeding the Rev. Francis Thomas.

The Rev. Haas, the new appointee to Bristol Methodist Church, entered the ministry in 1928, he having served prior to that time as a supply pastor. In 1924 he had charge of services, in the capacity of a supply, at Faith Church, Philadelphia; was named to East Montgomery Avenue Church, Philadelphia, in 1926; and to Pitman Church, Philadelphia, in 1927, remaining there until 1932. His ordination occurred while he was at Pitman Church. In 1932 he was assigned to Orthodox street, Philadelphia; Strasburg Church in 1935; and Lind Church in 1937.

The Rev. Haas, who has been located at Lima, near Media, for the past four years, is married, and the father of two girls.

The Rev. Oursler, who has been serving at Cornwells Heights, has not yet had an assignment. He is a non-conference member, and his assignment will be made after those of regular conference members.

The Rev. Zook, who has been serving Bristol Church, will go to Summit Hill. The Rev. Matchette has been transferred from Harriman Church to Girardville; and the Rev. Thomas from Yardley and Washington Crossing churches to Nesquehoning.

Vichy, Mar. 10.—France will throw protective screens of warships around her merchant vessels if "the British continue seizing them," Vice-Premier Darlan declared today.

At a press conference called by Marshal Petain and designed to stress the rapidly growing needs of France for food, Admiral Darlan explained his challenge to Britain with this simple statement:

"The people of France need to eat." The whole tone of the conference was that of condemnation of the British blockade and for the first time in official statements a definite note of possible defiance was struck by Admiral Darlan.

The Vice-Premier declared the English blockade was both "imbecilic" and militarily ineffective.

First stating that French warships at present will not actually be used to accompany French merchant vessels, Darlan declared:

"I will do all in my power to see that the French people eat."

Then, sounding a flat warning, he declared:

"If the British continue seizing our ships I will ask authorization to escort them with units of our navy."
